1. Wouldn't the world be horrified if someone 'brightened up' Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa by adding garish colours; mortified if someone 'improved' Monet's Water Lilies by adding florescent paints? Yet, the world says nothing when the Gospel of Jesus Christ is vandalised.

Jesus lived a perfect life of love, freely facing the cross to pay the price for our wrongs. There is no charge for Jesus' forgiveness. A simple step of faith to believe in him, acknowledging our brokenness and turning away from our wrongs, is all it takes. As faithful followers we should be like salt and light to a hurting world.

Many do not believe this simple step of faith leads to God. They 'paint in' more details, adding rules and believe that only their good deeds can save them. To Jesus this is more horrifying than defacing the most beautiful artwork, he warned us not to be deceived by believing any other gospel than his.

The Word of God, The Bible, is a precious gift. It clearly states that Jesus died once and for all, to make the way for people to become children of God, heir's to the throne. In dark days you can look at the pure promise of the cross, believing in Jesus' life saving hope.
